Developing Successful Legal Aid - Private Sector Tech Collaborations

As the legal aid technology field becomes more sophisticated in its use of technology and partnership models to address the justice gap, it is attracting private sector tech companies such as Microsoft, Google and legal tech start-ups as partners in this work. This workshop will explore partnership models between legal aid organizations and private enterprise in the legal, technology, and marketing sectors. Presenters will discuss their access to justice projects, how these partnerships were brokered and structured, what was successful, and lessons learned to strengthen future efforts. Attendees will walk away with a greater appreciation for pro bono tech partnerships and how they can structure their own for access to justice success. ?
