Iron Tech Lawyer Invitational: Now Accepting Applications!

The inaugural Iron Tech Lawyer Invitational is now accepting proposals from qualifying student projects! This is a national competition for student-created tech solutions that help bridge the justice gap.

Qualifying teams will be invited to a one-day competition in Washington, D.C. to pitch their proposal. The winning team will be awarded $5,000 to go towards advancing their technology solution.

In order to qualify, the project must be for an academic course, clinic, or independent study during the 2019-2020 academic year that involves the creation of a technology tool that strengthens legal service delivery or otherwise improves access to the civil legal system. Please note that only one project may be submitted per university, although the submissions are not limited to schools of law. Only five to eight projects will qualify.
